OFGEM APPOINTS MARK COX AS ASSOCIATE PARTNER, INDUSTRY CODES AND LICENSING

Energy regulator Ofgem has appointed Mark Cox as Associate Partner, Industry Codes and Licensing.

Mark has worked at Ofgem since 2003, taking key roles in both the gas distribution price control review, and the ongoing current electricity distribution price control review. He has also been responsible for bringing to a successful conclusion the final stages of the structure of electricity distribution charges project.

Ofgem's Acting Senior Partner, Transmission and Governance, Stuart Cook, said: "I am very pleased Mark has been appointed to this important position. Mark brings a combination of valuable experience in policy development, a broad industry background and considerable experience of managing the successful delivery of projects. His appointment underpins our commitment to the codes governance review and will maintain the momentum of our ongoing industry codes and licensing work."
